Researches

ICT

One of the important objectives of the Digital@dults project is the search for and research on the best practice in the education of adults in the field of information technology education (ICT). Special attention should be paid to work in social networks and to employment in the working world.

Inclusion

Another objective of the study is the different techniques and methods used in the implementation of inclusive education in Europe. Inclusive education is a pedagogical approach whose essential principle is the appreciation and recognition of diversity (= diversity) in education. The term derives from the Latin verb includere (include, include). This view is justifiable insofar as human rights defenders refuse to use the category of special educational needs: All people are in need of support and have a right to support, regardless of age, race, gender, disability, illness or other distinctions.

Brochure

Both results will be published in a special outcome brochure.

2nd Meeting in Schrobenhausen

The second transnational project meeting took place in Schrobenhausen, Germany. The working days were the 30. and 31. May 2019 in the adult education center Schrobenhausen. The previous work was explained, and the future work discussed. In addition, precise agreements were made about the objectives and the further work steps. The hosts in Schrobenhausen had prepared the meeting well and it was successful. Especially was the good asparagus food and the pleasant conversations.

Stakeholder's Event

By July 2019, all partners have held a stakeholder event in each partner Country. Important persons were invited in the field of education and information dissemination from the local environment and informed in detail by the representatives of each organization about the Digital@dults project: aims and objectives. In addition, the possibilities of how to participate during the project period were discussed afterward in detail.

Many participants, were very committed and interested, allowing each organization to collect details and contacts to involve many of the participants in the project activities.
